Personal history and heritage

Personal collections of migrants

Personal collections of artists and writers

PIM in creative arts

PIM and memory

Death and legacy

I am a senior lecturer in the School of Information Management at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. Previously, I was an assistant professor at the University of Osijek, Croatia (2004-2017). I received PhD in Information Sciences in 2010 from the University of Zadar, Croatia.

My research interests focus on the intersection between personal collections and legacy, particularly around the creation, preservation and re-use of personal information in family and societal contexts.
